

Main activities:

- Develop breeding direction, ideas and germplasm strategies to bring new barley varieties on the market. Implement the breeding strategy and manage the breeding projects.
- Develop a good understanding of business challenges through interactions with all relevant stakeholders, including competitors, government officials and/or public institutes.
- Lead local collaborations and propose exchanges with public and private partners in line with company standard and protocols.
- Manage breeding team dedicated to the breeding project
- Prepare and follow budgets and investments for the Barley breeding programs

Profile:

- Master Degree in Plant Breeding and Genetics, or a closely related field, is required. PhD or experience in barley breeding would be appreciated
- Strong demonstrated knowledge in breeding, quantitative genetics, agronomy and application of modern tools and technologies for improvement of cultivated crop are mandatory

- Ability to use software for data analyses, management, presentation, and reporting; general competence in statistics and data management is required
- Strong interpersonal, organizational, and analytical skills are needed
- Leadership skills and experience in managing people and projects
- Very good German and English skills

Our Benefits:

- 30 days holiday per year
- Capital-forming benefits and a company pension scheme
- Lunch allowance and drinks for free
- Targeted further training opportunities for professional and personal qualification
- International co-operation
- Company car and corporate benefits

Are you interested to join us?

Please send your application to: Bewerbung@limagrain.de or to: Limagrain GmbH, z. Hd. Frau Carolin Pielorz, Griewenkamp 2, 31234 Edemissen, Tel. 05176/9891-88

Limagrain GmbH, based in Edemissen, is a subsidiary of the internationally active Groupe Limagrain. Its sales and breeding activities on the German seed market focus on maize, rapeseed and cereals. Our products are marketed under the LG brand.